FORAKER'S REPLY.

In a statement last night Senator Foraker took up recent charges made by William B. Hearst and President Roosevelt, explaining his temporary connection with the Standard Oil Company, discussing the Brownsville incident and his connection with the rate bill.
The statement also contains a bitter attack on the president and Mr. Taft and what is accepted as a direct appeal to the negroes to vote against Taft.
"That I was employed by the company," says the senator, "was never concealed or denied. On the contrary, such employment was well known at the time to all concerned."
He reiterates his former statement that his employment by the Standard Oil Company had nothing to do with anything in which the government was interested and ended long before any prosecution by the government was undertaken.

"From the beginning of our government, senators and congressmen who were lawyers have been regarded as free to continue the practice of their profession if they so desired during their term of office so far as they might be able to do so without interfering with the public duties, and in such practice free to take any kind of employment that was offered which did not in any way conflict with their duties as members of Congress.
Senator Foraker then cites his activity in behalf of the Elkins law, under which the Standard was prosecuted, as evidence of the attitude toward the company after his employment by it ceased. Then he brings forward a letter from John D. Archbold dated May 7, 1906, asking if he would take a retainer in the event of action in the Ohio courts. His reply, dated May 9, was that he could not do so because he had found it necessary to give up practice and also "because of my relations to the public service," although he would have been glad to do it if things were otherwise. He produces the letter of Archbold of February 25, 1902, regarding the defeat of the Jones bill in the Senate, which was quoted by Hearst.

He again specifically denies the Hearst charges and brings more correspondence to show that the $50,000 draft sent him by Archbold was to help someone buy the Ohio State Journal, and says that the dates of the letters show that the money was sent almost a month before the letter about the Jones bill. Then Senator Foraker goes on to the president's attack on him and says: "Notwithstanding that the president says, in his answer to Mr. Bryan of September 23, that I was the representative and champion and defender of corporations in the Senate, there is not a word of truth in any such statement, whether made by him or anybody else, and there is not a scrap of evidence that can be produced supporting any such charge that cannot be as fully and satisfactorily explained as has been explained in the letter about the Jones bill and the proposed purchase of the Ohio State Journal."

Mr. Foraker says he has not at any time nor in any way sought Mr. Taft's help for re-election to the Senate, and continues: "When Mr. Taft's candidacy for the presidency was first announced I was surprised to learn from the newspapers that the programme of those having it in charge involved my elimination from public life. An open declaration of war, such as the 'elimination' proposition involved, naturally brought controversy and strife, when there should have been only peace. Finally, Mr. Cox announced a harmony proposition—Taft for President, Harr for Governor and me for Senator.
"He did that on his own motion, not only without any request from me, but contrary to my desires. Nevertheless, I at once publicly announced that if that expressed the wish of the republicans of Ohio no one would support Judge Taft more cordially than I would."
"Thereupon, Mr. Burton gave out an interview in which he stated that Mr. Taft would not accept from the republicans of Ohio an endorsement for the presidency if coupled with an endorsement of me for the senatorship. This appeared to be such a gross public insult and so uncalculated for that hostilities were immediately resumed. They continued until Mr. Taft was nominated. Then, so far as I was concerned, they stopped, and I supposed from the character of Mr. Taft's response to my note of congratulation that they had stopped on his part; at least I was so assured by his friends and managers, and in that connection I gave out the following statement:

"Just a little Cascaweet is all that is necessary to give your baby when it is cross and peevish. Cascaweet contains no opiates nor harmful drugs and is highly recommended by mothers everywhere. Sold by W. F. Creighton & Co.
Good for Biliousness.
"I took two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets last night, and I felt fifty per cent. better than I have for weeks," says J. J. Firestone of Allegan, Mich. "They are certainly a new article for biliousness." For sale by W. F. Creighton and Richard Gibson. Samples free.

"But if the Standard Oil Company was in good enough repute only three years ago to warrant Judge Taft in recommending Judge Doyle and President Roosevelt to appoint him to a judgeship, much more was it in sufficiently good repute when six or seven years earlier, before any of the recent violent attacks were made on it, to warrant me in accepting employment of the character mentioned."
Of the Brownsville affair Senator Foraker says: "In view of Judge Taft's statement, I trust I may be allowed to repeat what I have said a number of times—that in this whole matter I had no revenge to seek or personal ends to serve, but was anxious to see that common justice was done to the representatives of a noble and loyal race, every one of whom is by nature a republican."
"In other words," the Brownsville section I was also assured that Mr. Burton had no authority to give out his offensive interview."

The senator seeks to justify his position to the rate bill by declaring that its effect has been pernicious, saying:

"I need not repeat the arguments I have so often made to show that turning the control of the ratemaking power over to a commission was calculated to, and has impaired confidence in, railroad securities to such an extent as to stop railroad construction and do much injury to all kinds of business, from which it will require a long time to recover.
"Already the commodities clause has been held to be unconstitutional by one of the most respectable courts in the country. It is commonly acknowledged that it will be an absolute disaster to the whole country if the Supreme Court should reverse this decision.
"Without disparaging genuine morality, it can be truthfully said that less imaginary and professional 'rightness of action' and 'moral awakening' and more common sense in the policies of the administration would have been better for the country and would have excited less of that opposition of which Mr. Taft's letter complains.
"I have in mind," he says, "not the stopping indefinitely of adequate railroad construction at a time when it is so badly needed, nor the losses amounting to billions of dollars which have been sustained on account of the shrinkage in values of all kinds of securities, but the empty dinner pails and suffering families of unemployed wage-workers and the humbler classes of people to be found by thousands in every section of the Union. Responsibility for such results is serious."
For this condition the senator holds Mr. Roosevelt responsible.
"But what manner of man is Judge Taft, anyhow?"
"July 20, 1907, when he wrote to the president publishing, he was so devoted to the trust-smashing policies of the administration that he could not connect to be made president, it is a part of the same movement, I was to be honored with a re-election to the Senate, because of my opposition to that special feature of 'my policies,' and now since the Standard Oil Company matter there is manifested the most unusual indignation. Apparently every man who has any relation to the company is to be driven out of public life. If so, I shall probably have a great deal of company."

"But if the Standard Oil Company was in good enough repute only three years ago to warrant Judge Taft in recommending Judge Doyle and President Roosevelt to appoint him to a judgeship, much more was it in sufficiently good repute when six or seven years earlier, before any of the recent violent attacks were made on it, to warrant me in accepting employment of the character mentioned."

"In other words," the Brownsville

proceeding was not only all Judge Taft said it was, but in addition to being designing and selfish, it was prompted by the 'representatives of law-defying corporations to bring discredit upon the administration for its policy with respect to them.'"
"This is worse than the president's claim that the panic of last October was precipitated by a lot of rich men in Wall street, who wanted to bankrupt themselves and the whole country that they might discredit him; and worse even than the story that these same men raised a fund of $5,000,000 with which to prevent him from naming his chosen successor. I happen to know better than anybody else can know that there is not the slightest ground for such a charge. It is invention pure and simple and, judging by the frequency with which the president is bringing the matter to the front, born of that disgust which comes to the conscience when there is consciousness of having done a great wrong."
